BEST PRACTICES IN TEACHING AND LEARNING: STORYTELLING FOR SPECIAL NEEDS CHILDREN

1.0 Background

SEAMEO Regional Center for Special Education (SEAMEO SEN) is a Regional Center under the Southeast Asian Ministers of Education Organization (SEAMEO). Located in Melaka, Malaysia, SEAMEO SEN's roles are to promote teacher's capacity building, increasing awareness as well as fostering collaborative efforts to connect and build networking partnerships among countries, institutions and non-profit organizations.

SEAMEO SEN operations is gear up into achieving the SEAMEO Education Agenda 2016-2020 that encompasses of 7 priority agendas: Early childhood care and education; Addressing barriers to inclusion; Resiliency in the face of emergencies; Promoting technical and vocational education and training; Revitalizing teacher Education; Harmonizing higher education and research and Adopting a 21st century curriculum. These are contentions of educational agenda that are in tandem with the Sustainable Development Goals 4 (SDG 4) 2020.

2.0 Introduction

A Regular course is designed to promote Best Practices in Special Education for in service teachers across eleven SEAMEO Member Countries. SEAMEO SEN, through its Training and Consultation division has designed a course which aims to enhance the pedagogical, content and knowledge of Special Education teachers through face-to-face interactions and hands-on activities based on identified best practices. Quality training based on best practices is pertinent for teachers' professional development and preparing them for teaching and learning of the 21st century.

3.0 Storytelling For Special Needs Children

Storytellings are known to contribute to students' academic success. Overtime, storytelling has changed from oral fables and tales into using multimedia content and images to increase understanding and interactions. Stories may range from folktales, fairy tales to real life experiences. Teachers may use stories to deliver instructional content in classrooms, which includes the presentation of ideas, reviewing of materials and sharing of experiences (Wang & Zhan, 2010). Storytelling may also be a method to socialize and instill targeted values to children as they may not necessarily have logical boundaries which allow children to use their imaginations. Storytelling must not only depend on the ability of teacher to read and to speak, but also how children comprehends and apprehends the context of the story being told (Brug et. al., 2012).

Presenting learning materials in classroom through storytelling is a great way to bridge learners with diverse literacy needs. Special needs children which often have difficulties in leaning may grasp the learning context despite not being able to understand the language structures (Craig et. al., 2001).

Planning and implementing a story-based teaching and learning approach requires a careful structured strategy. The content, language and characters must be suitable and able to be understood by special needs children. Special Education teachers need to develop their skills to interpret and translate learning content into meaningful stories. Storytelling for Special Needs Children course has been designed to provide teachers with knowledge and skills to enable them to deliver appropriate pedagogical approaches and strategies in the classroom.

4.0 Course Objectives

- i. To impart and share best practices on the teaching and learning of the art of storytelling for SEN children;
- ii. To share knowledge and skills in developing and executing lesson plans for storytelling activities for SEN children;
- iii. To develop participant's ability and skills to adapt to course content that complements the needs of their students.
